

 The Cage

We are first born soft and supple
then we lose our way
Wounded by other's fears
Busily caging ourselves
Eagerly owning the iron
Cold and impersonal
Greedily we name it
Placing it on a mantle for all to see Until
As if by accident
Windows open
And
Love spills
In